ABSTRACT

Information Systems Inventory average method is a system created that aims to assist in the process of recording sales and purchases.

Problem often encountered in the trading business include the recording of sales and purchases often have errors in recording transactions, to tackle these problems required Information System Inventory items can answer the problems that are often experienced. Inventories can produce warehouse inventory cards and cards that can help companies determine the mutation entry and exit of goods.

Information Systems Inventory Method Using average can help in the CV. EKA RIFQI MULIA record purchases and sales, as well as be helpful for decision making in the management of inventory.

Keywords: Inventory, Average, Information Systems